REVISED CONSTITUTION FACES REFERENDUM TODAY

Model Parliament to be elected also

The campus goes to the polls today to elect this year's Model Parliament.

The prime minister of the house will be the leader of the elected party. The potential P.M.'s are Charles Shannon of the C.T.C.M., Cliff Post of the Liberals, Bill Lenihan of the N.D.P., Fred Harris of the Progressive Conservatives, and David Dent of the YCL.

Campaigning, during the last ten days, has been extensive. The Union Ballroom was available to each party for speakers who expounded the virtues of their respective parties. Political literature flooded the campus. The Model Parliament Committee, sponsored four forums on political affairs, in which all party leaders were quizzed by chairman and audience alike.

The parliament will sit from February 9 to 11, from 7 to 11 pm. It will run according to the rules of the Canadian House of Commons. There will be sixty seats, allotted to each party according to the percentage of the total student vote obtained respectively.

The organization has been directed by the steering committee under George Kulaneck, chairman; Betsy Brugler, secretary; and Ken Elliott, publicity chairman. The five parties decided on the rules for the operation of the campaign week in advance.

Editorial

The Constitution which has been put to a referendum today is more than the sum of its parts. It cannot be voted on piece-by-piece, and, more important, it should not be voted against because of disagreement with any single provision. Today, more than ever before, there are reasons why a Constitution must not be dated.

Events have transpired in student affairs during the past few years that have effectively changed the role of the student in society. He has come to realize that in order to have his ever increasing demands for political, social, economic and educational reforms met, he himself must actively participate. Often, however, he has found himself badly equipped for carrying out this task, having no mandate from his fellows to clearly define his role. This is the area in which a Constitution, whether because of an excessive rigidity or laxness, determines the speed with which progress is achieved.

This proposed Constitution does mirror the changing emphasis in student affairs during the last few years; the provision for a Vice-President for External Affairs, for example, reflects an increasing and very real involvement in provincial and national affairs.

Hundreds of students will be affected by financial changes if the proposed Constitution is passed today. But if enough of them self-righteously refuse to vote because they "don't know enough about the issues", they will effectively prevent the passage of a flexible Constitution which can perform the functions our Students' Society has already demonstrated that it requires.

There is no excuse for not voting: the Constitution reprinted on pages 4 and 5 is short enough to read during lunch, the polls are open till 5, and students may vote in practically every campus building, regardless of faculty.

Two-Thirds Majority Of 20% Vote Needed To Pass Revisions

Voting on the proposed revision of the Students' Society Constitution, as amended at Monday's Open Meeting, will take place from 9 am until 5 pm today. For the referendum to be of any effect whatsoever, at least 20 per cent of the Society — about 2,000 students — must vote. Two thirds of these votes must be affirmative, if the revised Constitution is to be adopted.

The text of the revision appears on pages 4 and 5 of today's Daily.

Polling stations have been set up in the Arts Building, Physical Sciences Centre, Leacock Building, McConnell Engineering Building, Students' Union, medical building, and in the main lobbies of Royal Victoria College, Bishop Mountain Hall, and the Law Building. In addition, medical, dental and nursing students who are at the Montreal General Hospital may vote at the Dental Clinic from 9 am to 4 pm.

Unlike most campus elections, students may vote at any of these polling stations, regardless of their faculty. Ballots for Model Parliament will be available at the same polls.

The decision to submit the proposed constitution to referendum — in effect, to amend the present Constitution — was taken at Monday's Open Meeting by a vote of more than 300. Only 150 votes are required to call a referendum.

The Open meeting accepted two and rejected one sub-amendment published in the Daily of January 25.

The accepted sub-amendments involve making the Inter-Residence Council a member of the Board of Regular Committees, and insuring that at least one Arts and one Science student are among the three Arts & Science Representatives elected yearly (if the new constitution goes through).

The meeting rejected a third sub-amendment, which would have placed the President of the Women's Union on the Executive Committee of the Students' Council. As the proposed constitution now stands, the WU President is a member of the Students' Council, a position analogous to her actual position on the SEC at present.

Five modifications to the original revision were submitted by Bill Fraiberg, the Chairman of the Constitution Revision Committee and mover of the amendment to the present constitution (ie, the revised constitution).

Only one of these changes was substantive — it included the Graduate Nursing Students'

Society among the list of schools and faculties whose members are proceeding to a second university degree, and whose Students' Society fees will be lower than those of other students working toward their first degree.

The other four changes concerned the form of four sections of the proposed constitution.

Krassner amuses audience with outspokenness

by PATRICK MACFADDEN

"The gaps between what people do and what they should do, provide the moral basis of satire." So said "Realist" editor Paul Krassner to an obviously enthralled audience at a Scope-sponsored meeting last night in the Stephen Leacock Building. The free-swinging speech covered such varied topics as artificial vaginas, (available on the American market), the propriety of semen-flavoured Metracal and what Jackie Kennedy really ought to do.

The gap between satire and reality has long since closed, said Krassner. Satirical stories he has run in The Realist have been taken as fact, not because they were particularly well done but because life has begun to parody itself. He quoted as an example the story that homosexuality might provide an answer to the problem of birth control — a story later accepted as having some basis in fact.

Asked why he seemed to bristle whenever he was accused of bad taste, Krassner quite reasonably pointed out that his reaction was due to the tightness of his underwear. Not only that; the contrast between the poor lighting in the building and the bright lighting in the Men's Room worried him. Was this, he wondered aloud, to facilitate literate graffiti?

As for bad taste, Krassner felt that the question of what was and what was not to be unanswerable. Bad taste, he offered, is "indefinable"; people have things about different things. His "mother poster", for example, which he held up to a captivated audience. This turned out to be a simple, boldly-printed slogan which said "..... Communism". ".....", Krassner pointed out, could be more acceptable if it were rendered as "Sleep Communism", or even, "have a meaningful relationship

Monopolizing media

On August 31, 1962, The United States' "Communications Satellite Act of 1962" became law. That law authorized the establishment within the United States of a private business enterprise to be called the Communications Satellite Corporation (Comsat). By January 1963 a Board of Incorporators, appointed by the President of the United States, had completed the necessary legal formalities to give Comsat existence as a jural entity.

During the latter half of 1963 and early 1964, representatives of the United States Government and Comsat participated in extensive talks with officials from other nations, considering the establishment of an international system of satellite communications, in which it was hoped, a substantial number of countries would participate. Participation was understood to include sharing of the costs of establishing the system, having services of the system made available to the nation concerned, and actively taking part in decision-making with regard to the nature, extent, rates and policy formulation of the entire system.

On July 21, 1964, a Plenipotentiary Conference was convened in Washington, D.C. to establish interim arrangements for a global commercial communications satellite system. Canada was one of the attending nations, and the first to formally sign two Agreements finalized at that Conference.

The "Agreement Establishing Interim Arrangements for a Global Commercial Communication Satellite System" and the accompanying "Special Agreement", both opened for signature on August 20, 1964, have now been signed by nineteen nations. Participation in the proposed system by signatory states is based upon mathematical computations of their anticipated share of traffic utilization in the system. The amount of each nation's contribution to the cost of the system, and the percentage of its vote on the controlling Committee of the Consortium created by the Agreements, is to reflect the proportion of expected utilization by each country.

In the final analysis, because the lion's share of the research and development of the system has been done in the United States, and because the United States is the overwhelmingly predominant investor in the field of satellite communications, the United States is accorded sixty-one percent of the total vote on the Committee of the Consortium. In effect, the United States, through its private corporation Comsat, has obtained a position of nearly exclusive control of world satellite communications.

Control of communications media has long been recognized as the first vital step in controlling society. Whether it is appropriate, justifiable, desirable or inevitable that the emerging system of global satellite communications should be subject to such unilateral control is a profound and perplexing question. Serious thought must be given to this question today.

By the terms of the 1964 Agreements, the interim arrangements now in force are to be re-examined, and a permanent set of arrangements are to be drawn up, at a conference to be held sometime in 1969. It is not too early for every government in the world to turn its serious attention to the potentials of that 1969 conference.

The Carpetbagger

Today's Model Parliament election will probably attract more voters than ever before — not because of increased interest or public awareness, but simply because the vote will be carried out in conjunction with the constitutional referendum. So instead of the usual 1,500 voters, the political ballot counters will weed through perhaps 3,000.

Next week, however, parliament will sit and the customary handful of interested students will attend a few minutes of the session on each of the three nights.

Over the past five years, the MP's have always outnumbered the spectators' gallery and many a sitting has played to a Daily reporter and the two Union night cleaners. Sometimes the Daily also sent a photographer.

Even since the abolition of write-in candidates, model parliament at McGill has lost its spark. No longer can the government be brought down by the ingenuity of an independent, and no longer can the debate be fired by a party with highly satiric planks and effervescent speakers.

Now parties must have a serious platform and debates are carried on in the true spirit of Ottawa — dry, dull, well rehearsed and very tedious. It's no wonder nobody comes.

The topics brought up for debate are the same as those discussed on Parliament Hill. Adequate coverage is given in the city papers. Certainly, no new light can be shed on these issues by campus politicians. We cannot begrudge them the privilege of debating these issues, nor can we take them to task for lying awake nights in great anxiety over the pressing problems facing our nation; however, we can expect a student parliament to present a mature and stimulating series of debates with some originality.

Bring back the days when the price of hogs was discussed, when MP's appeared in costume as caricatures of our national leaders and brought down the house with their satiric rhetoric. Let CTCM turn the clocks inside out and let us restore the GNU Party to power. Where are the Neo-Radicals and who can rally enough friends to get an independent seat?

How long has it been since a really clean hustling campaign and why were all the Daily's in the Arts Building one day last week stuffed with one party's literature?

Perhaps what we need is a "mock parliament". If what we have now is a model then we have the wrong thing. Our MP's will never solve national problems in the Ballroom, and the scarcity of observers in the "gallery" has shown that the format we have is not attractive to even a minute percentage of students. Let's step up the debate, set time limits on each motion, let the government fall, if need be and provide the material to offer a good crowd an entertaining and provocative evening.

LETTERS

Questions Validity Of Constitution

Dear Madam:

According to the present Constitution of the Students' Society, any proposed amendment shall be published in the McGill Daily at least two weeks prior to the Open Meeting. The Constitution goes on to read:

"Alternate amendments shall be published in the McGill Daily at least one week prior to such a meeting. An alternate amendment shall apply only to the same section or sections of the Articles affected by the amendment proposed in the preceding week."

This article clearly renders the adoption of the five modifications of the original text of the new Constitution proposed by Mr. Fraiberg at the Open Meeting of February 1, 1965 unconstitutional.

It is unfortunate that not many students are aware of the correct procedures as regards constitutional amendment or open meetings. It is even more unfortunate that it is not explained to them when and how such procedures are being used. Among other questions, I would like to know if one can delete one article of the proposed Constitution without getting rid of the entire Constitution. Nonetheless, lest the main grievance of this letter be overlooked, it now looks as if the student body is going to vote in the referendum for a Constitution already unconstitutional.

Stephen Schecter, B.A. II

Ed. note: In order to clear up any doubts as to the constitutionality of today's referendum, Ed Boulter, the vice-president of the Students' Society, has been asked to answer the questions raised in Mr. Schecter's letter.

Dear Madam,

Article X, Section (6) of the present constitution states, "The authority on procedure at meetings of the Students' Society shall be 'Cushing's Manual of Parliamentary Practice'". In chapter IV, "On the introduction of business", article 56a, Cushing states in part that "any motion or resolution may be withdrawn or modified by the mover at any time before a decision, amendment, or ordering of the yeas and nays, except a motion to reconsider, which shall not be withdrawn without the leave of the Senate (i.e. the assembly)."

It is clear then that parliamentary procedure allows modification of a motion by its mover and does not consider these modifications as amendments to the motion, as would be the case if these modifications were proposed by parties other than the original mover. This interpretation of an

Political round-robin previews party stands

The leaders of the five campus political parties, Charles Shannon (CTCM), Cliff Post (Liberals), Bill Lenihan (NDP), Fred Harris (Progressive Conservatives), and David Dent (YCL) last night held a final political forum chaired by George Kubanek in preparation for today's Model Parliament elections.

In reply to a question from the Chair, Dent stated that the only lesson that could be learned by Canada from the present socialist countries is "what their errors are and how not to make them here."

Once again Dent pointed out that the present "communist" countries are really "socialist" ones. When asked to clarify further, he explained that to become truly communist a country must first go through socialism.

Post, when questioned about his stand on NATO, commented that it should substitute educational and economic assistance for military aid. He believes that with responsible governments both in the USSR and the US a nuclear war will not occur.

Harris justified his Club's Progressive Conservative title even though it differs completely from the national one, by explaining that it "served as its grassroots." By this he stated that he meant that "we collect the ideas of our fellow students" which might become part of the national party's platform. As an example he cited the making of student fees tax exempt.

Shannon clarified his party's policy. He affirmed that his party was rooted on "basic fundamental principles" and that it did not handle problems with dogmatic solutions. On Quebec, Shannon stated that he believes the problem to be mainly psychological rather than economic or political.

Lenihan expounded on his party's plans to repatriate the economy with a 6% tax on foreign capital in Canada. He also explained how his party would help to stimulate business by using money taken from a trimmed defence budget.

Tickets on sale for extended run of R&W Revue

"Cache on Delivery" has been extended for three additional performances on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, February 11-13. Contrary to previous extended runs, there will be no Saturday Matinee.

When it was announced last week that there was to be no extension, the box office was rushed and only single seats remained. It was then deemed feasible for the SEC to grant the Revue the extension. If the extended run sells out, it has been estimated that the Revue will perhaps show a profit this season.

The tickets for the extra performances go on sale today at 9 am at the Union Box Office.

RVC security on the beam

The Montreal police were alerted Monday night for the second time within the last five days when a mysterious prowler passed through the electric beam at Royal Victoria College setting off an alarm.

Residence officials, when questioned, refused to issue any comments about the disturbance.

Girls at the residence, however, reported that two officers and plainclothes policeman were seen questioning an unidentified man at approximately 1 am in the Roscoe Wing of the building.

The girls attempted to make further investigations into the matter but were unsuccessful in uncovering any leading clues. Several claimed to have crept quietly downstairs into the foyer of the Roscoe Wing only to be turned back by the officers on duty. The girls disclosed as well that the policemen left shortly after 1:30 am with the prowler in custody.

The first incident of this nature occurred last Thursday when cries for help were heard in the east wing of RVC. Police then had been unable to trace the source of alarm.

amendment, as opposed to modification as inferred by our parliamentary authority, clearly renders Mr. Fraiberg's motion within the limits of our present constitution.

Our constitution exists solely as a set of rules by which to govern ourselves. Its intent in most cases is clear; the intent of Sect (4), Art. XII (Amendments) in the present constitution, as printed in the Daily Jan. 15 this year, was simply to eliminate the procedure of sub-amendments coming from the floor of an open meeting. There is no mention, nor was there any intent, of restricting the normal parliamentary rights of members of the Society. These rights, as stated above, have been guaranteed by reference to Cushing's Manual in Article X (Students' Society Meetings). The requirement of publication in the Daily prior to the meeting serves only as a notice of issues and motions to be discussed at the meeting. At the meeting the official motion is made in accordance with regular parliamentary procedure, as described by Cushing.

Ed Boulter
Vice-president,

Congress Towards Canadian Maturity

The following is reasonable approximation of the official 1965 Model Parliament platform of the Congress Towards Canadian Maturity: If elected to power, CTCM proposes to:

1. Establish a native Canadian monarchy, with emperors of alternately French and English extraction, to rule constitutionally.
2. Create a bilingual and bicultural Federal District out of the cities of Ottawa, Hull and environs, to serve as Canada's capital. Such a District would be completely independent of Ontario, Quebec, or Charlotte Whittin.
3. Retain, with the above and any other appropriate amendments, a repatriated and emasculated B.N.A. Act.
4. Award the Canada Medal to a prominent Canadian.
5. Establish a Royal Commission to find a prominent Canadian.
6. Send aspiring students abroad so they may become prominent.
7. Establish French as a language of parliamentary debate and of record in all ten provinces and thus, legally at least, on a par with English.
8. Foment irredentist claims to the Alaskan Panhandle.
9. Lend material support and encouragement to the separatist movement in Newfoundland.
10. Adopt the French version of "O Canada" as our federal anthem.

ELECTION PROMISES, POLICIES, PLATFORMS

Progressive Conservative

The primary issue of this campaign is that of national leadership. Since assuming office Mr. Pearson and his government have stumbled from one fiasco to the next — Gordon's first budget, Miss Lamarsh's three pension plans, the Rivard case, and most recently the firing of Minister Without Portfolio Yvon Dupuis. Mr. Pearson and his government have had long enough to prove themselves in office — they are incompetent to say the least.

Perhaps the NDP will become an alternative if it ever emerges from the world of theory into the reality of everyday life in Canada.

John Diefenbaker certainly does not seem to have the confidence of too many people. But the Conservative party under new leadership could offer a positive alternative — a return to stable and responsible government. Because this is the only way to return to good government in Canada, we, the McGill Conservatives follow the lead of Quebec leader Leon Balcer in calling for a national leadership convention for the Conservative party.

We also recommend the following policies for immediate consideration by the government.

1—A complete examination and revision of the federal tax structure. The system today is so anarchic that at times policies seem to conflict, eg. while sponsoring the Winter Works program to keep up employment throughout the winter in the construction industry, the government has put a tax on construction materials, thus retarding the industry. Also only by doing this will the federal government have a clear idea of what taxing powers it needs vis-a-vis the provinces.

2—A positive immigration policy. This means setting up publicly known and objective criteria for admittance to Canada, so that cases of de facto discrimination can be brought to light. The Immigration Department should also actively seek persons of special skills who are much needed in many of our industries.

3—Complete assistance, including military, for Malaysia in its fight against Indonesia.

4—Full and complete participation in NATO AND NORAD, including the obtaining of nuclear weapons.

If you want responsible government with sound programs, vote Progressive Conservative on February 3.

Liberal — Whig

Economic Policy:

The present political trend towards decentralization will produce multiple responsibility. A permanent Economic Board should be established composed of representatives from the provinces and the central government. This Board will map out local and regional problems and a national policy. In this way we will be able to meet the objectives of the Economic Council of Canada.

Of Special Concern to the Student:

1. Parents should be allowed to deduct school expenses from their income tax since in the majority of cases it is the parent who pays tuition costs.

2. Students reporting summer earnings should not be subject to paying income tax up to an amount of 2,000 dollars. ($2,000.)

Justice:

1. The right to vote should be granted to all Canadian citizens eighteen years or over.

2. There should be an OMBUDSMAN for Canada to investigate all complaints of mal-treatment of the public by governmental agencies.

3. A Liberal government would order the immediate removal of R.C.M.P. from university campuses so that there can be independent thought in our schools.

Foreign Policy:

1. A Canadian Peace Corps should be established which would supply underdeveloped countries with trained technicians, doctors, teachers and capital equipment.

2. Canada should donate troops to the United Nations as a Permanent U.N. Peace Force.

3. Mainland China should be seated in the United Nations as a permanent member of the Security Council and that a new seat be created for Formosa in the General Assembly.

4. At the request of Malaysia, Canada should provide that country with full military support.

5. Canada should oppose the MLF and any extension of nuclear arms.

Special NATO Policy:

Canada should stress that NATO be transformed from a primarily military and defensive alliance into an educational and economic assistance organization.

New Democratic

The rationale underlying the policies of the New Democrats is that the needs of humanity as a whole must never be neglected. Our belief in the dignity of mankind is expressed in our past actions and in the programme of our Federal Party.

The Platform of the McGill New Democrats is predicated upon this rationale. We advocate, among other things, free education and Medicare, increased pensions, lower taxes in the lower income groups, a rewriting of the Immigration Act along lines which will not allow racial discrimination. If elected, the New Democratic Party will institute a program of economic planning which will alleviate unemployment.

The New Democratic Party is committed to the principals of economic and social equality, and insists that production be directed toward the advancement of the individual citizen. For this reason we repudiate the policy of wasteful spending on unnecessary weaponry, and would, if elected, eliminate the Canadian Nuclear force and concentrate our reduced defence spending upon the maintenance of a highly mobile support force which would be placed at the disposal of the United Nations.

Canadians cannot afford, nor do we believe that they will tolerate, a Parliamentary session as non-productive as our last. There must, for this reason, be Parliamentary Reforms made which will prevent any recurrence of such fiascos as the Flag "Debate".

The New Democratic Party recognizes the need for positive action in our government. Over the past year, an immense backlog of unsolved problems has been added to the already almost debilitating list of unfinished and unattempted Parliamentary business. The New Democrats offer positive solutions to Canada's problems, and ask for your vote on February 3 in order that we might begin at the University level to set an example which, hopefully, our adult leaders may soon begin to follow.

Young Communist League

Canada today spends approximately 1,250 dollars a year on defense for every Canadian over 14 years of age.

The government is a party to deals which sell, at low cost, the power of our great rivers to the U.S. on a permanent basis, while many areas at home are chronically underdeveloped and short of power.

The government uses the time tied up in the flag debate to sign an agreement allowing American nuclear bombers to fly overhead at will.

With an economy owned elsewhere, it is hardly surprising that we are unable to follow an independent and socially-oriented policy at home or abroad.

It is not that governments do not want to provide work and security, but that they cannot.

And yet our social democrats are only ready to try and cajole the great monopolies into giving back what should never have been taken away.

The YCL would immediately take the necessary steps to repatriate the economy, and to place it firmly under government control.

This would provide a basis for radically different policies. The YCL would also ensure that any pact between the 2 Canadian nations was based on equality, and entered into voluntarily.

Canada would divest itself of nuclear arms and of membership in nuclear or aggressive nuclear alliances, and it would encourage others to do the same.

It would protest atrocious wars such the one being waged by the U.S. in Vietnam.

With public ownership of monopolies, the economy could be planned so as to provide work, development, and social facilities where they are needed.

The best medical care, the best education, the best housing would be available to every citizen.

Students and those being retrained would be provided with an income like any productive worker.

All people would be free to realize their potential and that of their society.

During the long question period, Krassner admitted that he "was amused by anybody having a cause." Some Socialist theories he agreed with, some of Goldwater's ideas he agreed with. He knew many Socialists but he had observed none of them taking degrees in factory work. "Wouldn't it be funny if I were really pissing behind this thing," he not unfairly pointed out as, half-hidden behind the lectern, he poured himself a drink. His audience, who seemed in their questions eager to display themselves as Realist readers, heartily agreed.

As to why he published his magazine, he said he found it was fun. "If I stopped having fun doing it, I wouldn't do it." And he liked America because it was one of the few places where he would be allowed to do it.

Redmen make bid to vacate basement

The Redman hockey team is travelling to Quebec City to play the Laval Rouge et Or this evening. A win would be a big step on their journey out of the cellar, which they began last Saturday when they tied the tough McMaster Marlins 6-6.

Junior hoopla loop releases playoff ruling

The playoff rule for the Junior City Intercollegiate Basketball League was revealed last Friday and is at best, strange. Should CMR beat Sir George in their next encounter there would be a three way tie at the head of the league; Sir George, CMR, and the Indians would all have 4-2 records.

The three names would be dropped into a hat and the two names drawn would meet in a sudden-death game; the winner would take on the third team in a two out of three series.

If Sir George were to defeat CMR, they would finish up on top, one game up on the Tribe. A challenge round, two out of three, would then be set up. The ruling states however, that the team with more wins in the season carries the difference of wins (in this case, one) into the series. The Indians would be forced to take two straight to win the championship. They can do it. We just may be faced with a winning team this year.

On January 13 the Rouge et Or topped an injury ridden Redman squad 10-3 at the Winter Stadium. If the Redmen can come up with as good a game as they did in last Saturday's outing against the Marlins, they will have a chance to knock of Laval, a team which will no doubt be overconfident in their home rink.

Laval is a strong team that has made great strides after a poor start and it will take all the Redmen have to take points from them. If the Redmen continue to show the improvement that was apparent against McMaster however, they may work their way out of the league basement tonight.

GOAL: Jerry Kostandoff (stick in air) rejoices after potting his second goal of the night against McMaster last Saturday. Fred McRobie looks on from out in front and Ian Taylor licks his chops on the right. The game ended in a 6-6 tie.

Carnival takes to beds

Did you ever see a girl being pushed around McGill's Lower Campus on a big double bed? Actually no one has, but this will be part of The First Annual Dow Roman Relay. The relay will closely follow the annual Toilet Bowl game between the Daily and the S.E.C. on Thursday, February 18.

The Red and White Committee of the Engineering Faculty will be putting on the race (?), with most of its departments taking part. Beside beds, the sporting plumbers will use a combination of wagons and genuine sports model chariots, especially constructed for the event.

The Engineers claim that to spite the Artsmen for failing to enter a team, they will start the relay directly in front of the Arts building, and in reply to questions concerning use of the beds, the Engineers replied that they would be glad to take any girl that would go along for the ride.
